Thus, you are not forced to subscribe to the videos you want to download since you can always access the page by using the built-in browser or your default browser of choice. Besides this, you can enjoy the videos offline later on. The URL of any video can be simply placed into the clipboard and you can directly drag it over the app's icon on the desktop. Moreover, you have the ability to add the URL of the video manually and the software will search the Internet and provide you with suggestions. You should be aware that you are able to grab videos from several sources at once and that the software supports media files. This enables you to grab the videos and transfer them to your device in a way that they can be played there even if you have no Internet connection. A wide selection of options The good news is that you have a myriad of options to indicate the video that you want to download or play. These include choosing the URL of the file, inputting a keyword, copying the URL and much more. However, you need to keep in mind that the program suggests the first video that is available in the search results it provides you with. In case you do not have a direct link or do not know how to get it, then the software can help you with this. Therefore, you can type in a search term, then the search engine will return a list of suggestions that are likely to be related to it. The only negative point is that you should know that, if you do not take any action, then the program will start to download the first clip that it suggested, which can be problematic since the program automatically chooses the first one. Download the videos you want for offline enjoyment later on It should be noted that the program can recognize several files, such as MP4, 3GP, AVI, MOV, MP3, FLV and others.
